Police have accused a woman of selling her drugs using her children and saying her prayers to “pull it off”. “A 25-year-old woman was arrested on Friday after the accused pleaded guilty in court to drug-related charges,” Habib told the Daily Mail. The relatives of the woman identified her as Tandeeka Dhami, and they are the two children. “Dhami has shown an interest in the Quran since childhood. She would take a regular bath everyday and would always recite prayers,” said Habib. Annie Reeves aka Tandeeka Dhami was arrested in the United Kingdom, on August 16, 2019, along with her daughter Amba and her son Vijay. Tandeeka allegedly sold the drugs by ringing phone numbers she had obtained online. She is said to have agreed to sell drugs in order to raise money for her daughter’s wedding. Correspondence between Tandeeka and the supplier allegedly began in January, and the “sale” was completed on August 16. An empty packet of the substance contained within Dhami's home was seized by police and was found to contain the "psychedelic-like" drug lysergic acid diethylamide (LSD), which is the same substance believed to have been sold by Keith Richards in 1968. Police said the 16-year-old girl had also bought the LSD and her name would be redacted from reports. In April of 2019, a similar incident was reported in the United Kingdom. A mother was also arrested on August 16, after police uncovered a pound of the drug within her car. The woman also said she had received a text message from someone asking her for LSD, which she would not provide. (C) 2020, Major League Baseball, Inc. and Major League Baseball Players Association.
